Planting Report for Fiscal Year 2011-2012

Working with citizens and other agencies, Portland Parks & Recreation provides key services for the planning, planting, and maintenance of the City's estimated 236,000 street trees, 1.2 million park trees, and innumerable privately owned trees. When it comes to planting, PP&R grows and procures trees; plants trees in parks, schools, and on city property; issues permits for street tree plantings; and requires trees to be planted when certain private trees are removed and when development occurs. This summary report provides a tally of the many trees that PP&R is involved in planting each year.

In addition to planting, PP&R educates the public through the Neighborhood Tree Steward Program; enforces City Code to preserve significant trees and the City's tree canopy; provides 24-hour emergency response services for storm and tree-related emergencies; and provides support to nonprofit organizations involved in tree planting, such as Friends of Trees.
