

What to Expect During Construction

Based on information collected about the condition of the Interceptor, the project team has selected a repair technology that can be completed from inside the sewer line and will not likely require digging trenches in the roadway. The project work zones will be located at manholes (see map) and will move as the project segments are completed, with work at each manhole lasting up to two months. Crews may be working at multiple locations at the same time.

Accessing the sewer line through manholes will require temporary lane closures, which will require traffic control and construction signage. Where needed, traffic will be routed around the worksites. Traffic controls (cones, flaggers, temporary barriers, etc.) will be in place only during work periods and removed daily.

The manhole access locations will have adjacent staging areas for materials and construction vehicles. Equipment that generates noise will include sewer cleaning trucks, compressors, generators, ventilation fans, and other trucks and related equipment. The night work will also require lighting of the project area.
