The Portland Housing Bureau (PHB) addresses the unmet housing needs of the people of Portland, Oregon. One way we do this is by preserving existing affordable homes, particularly those serving seniors and people with disabilities.

THE CHALLENGE

In 2008, PHB identified 11 privately owned buildings at risk of losing their affordability by 2013. Because of their highly desirable locations, more than 700 affordable homes were susceptible to being converted to market-rate rentals or sold as condominiums, displacing vulnerable residents. Under the leadership of Portland City Commissioner Nick Fish and then-Bureau Director Will White—now serving in the office of U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley—PHB launched 11X13, a campaign to preserve the affordability of those buildings subsidized by federal rent assistance contracts with U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) that were set to expire.

WORKING TOGETHER

The City partnered with the HUD, the State of Oregon, the Network for Oregon Affordable Housing (NOAH), local nonprofits and private funders. The coalition worked in close coordination for five years, and this spring, the City announced that it had successfully preserved each of the 11 buildings, requiring 60 years of affordability for 700 homes located in Portland’s vibrant and desirable neighborhoods.

11X13 was funded by local, private and federal sources. For every dollar the City invested, we leveraged $4 in private and $5 in federal funds. The City invested $22 million in Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), Section 108 loans, and local urban renewal dollars. This leveraged $110 million in private investments and more than $120 million in federal assistance over the next 20 years.

The flexibility of CDBG funds was critical in filling financing gaps throughout this campaign. Without CDBG, the $120 million in federal rent assistance contracts would have been at risk. More importantly, over 700 affordable homes in our community would have been lost.
The Portland Housing Bureau and partners successfully preserved each of the 11 buildings below, which are home to some of our city’s most vulnerable citizens. Operating agreements require 60 years of affordability for 700 homes.

OUR PARTNERS
Seniors, people with disabilities and other vulnerable people add value and diversity to our city. Their presence and participation in our community is dependent on the availability of safe, decent and affordable places to call home. At the core of the 11X13 Preservation Campaign was an effort to preserve affordable homes and ensure that seniors and other vulnerable people can stay in their homes and continue to contribute to their communities.

As you view the profiles of residents from each of these 11 buildings, you can read and also hear their stories by scanning the QR codes at the bottom right of each poster with the QR reader on your phone.

You’ll hear from residents—many of whom are seniors, disabled and earning very low incomes—telling their stories about what their homes mean to them as they are able to age in place and maintain access to the parks, cultural events and services that our community has to offer.

This accomplishment in preservation was possible because of our local partners, REACH CDC, Northwest Housing Alternatives, Cedar Sinai Park, Union Labor Retirement Association, Guardian Management, Winkler Development Corp. and Harsch Investment Properties, which are mission-driven nonprofit organizations or businesses with a passion for providing homes for vulnerable people.

This commitment to residents is exemplified by the unique services provided by these agencies for residents. For example, Northwest Housing Alternatives has a well developed Resident Services Program to promote health and housing stability for its residents. When REACH renovated Walnut Park, garden boxes were added for residents to grow their vegetables. Cedar Sinai Park provides comprehensive “aging-in-place” services to residents. These details are part of what transforms these buildings into homes and expands everyone’s access to the amenities that make this city great.
Seniors deserve the opportunity to “age in place” within the community they helped build. Robert, 75, moved to Oregon in 1963 from El Paso, Texas. Robert was a renowned hair stylist, working with notable salons and theater companies. When his rent tripled, Robert needed a lifeline. Today, he lives in a beautiful ninth-floor apartment with a patio sanctuary he created with ceramic tile and tropical plants. Robert says, “I never wanted to live in the suburbs.” At the 1200 Building, he enjoys stunning views of the West Hills from his downtown location. Robert lives near museums, theaters and shopping, maintaining the life he wants to continue throughout his senior years.
The 1200 Building was preserved in August, 2012. The building nearly lost affordability with pending expiration of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) mortgage and rent assistance contract.

With public and private investments, Cedar Sinai Park purchased and renovated The 1200 Building. It will remain affordable for the next 60 years through public and private financial assistance, a long-term, renewed rent assistance contract and a regulatory agreement with the City.

The 1200 Building is one of several downtown Portland buildings that benefitted from a preservation tool unique to Oregon, “Residual Receipts.” Residual Receipts were funds held in a HUD-controlled account by the State and represented rent in excess of operating expenses from prior years.
ECONOMIC AND BUSINESS EQUITY

Minority participation in this project is 27.5%. Women participation is currently 13% with a total MWESB participation of 36.1%, far exceeding requirements.

Jamie Montoya, Resident of The Admiral

Everyone deserves a safe, decent and affordable place to call home. Jamie, 45, moved into The Admiral six months ago. She struggles with bipolar disorder and attempted suicide several times. After her most recent attempt, she left the hospital with a new outlook on life. She says the stability that her home provides helps her manage her stress and mental health. According to Jamie, living at the Admiral has provided her with self sufficiency and independence. Now, Jamie works as a peer mentor where she coaches people with mental health challenges. Jamie loves the location of her downtown building, which is close to public transportation and Director Park, where she attends concerts with her dog, Zeek.
Admiral Apartments

The Portland Housing Bureau (PHB) invests community resources to solve the unmet housing needs of Portlanders.

Admiral Apartments is a 37-unit, historic building in the City’s South Park Blocks Urban Renewal Area. It is home to seniors and adults with special needs earning less than 60% Median Family Income (MFI).

FUNDING

The City’s investment of $3.64M in tax increment financing leveraged $7M in other financing, including investor equity from historic tax credits and LIHTC, permanent loans, a weatherization grant and owner equity including a deferred development fee.

PRESERVATION

Admiral Apartments was preserved in November, 2008 by REACH CDC. The building nearly lost affordability with pending expiration of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) mortgage and rent assistance contract.

This building will remain affordable for the next 60 years through public and private financial assistance, a long-term, renewed rent assistance contract and a regulatory agreement with the City.
QUICK FACTS

- The Admiral has 37 units, including 14 studios and 23 one-bedrooms.
- Located in downtown Portland with a “walkscore” of 100, The Admiral is near the Central Library, the Performing Arts Center, Fox Tower Theater and the new outdoor urban space, Director Park.
- The project utilized historic tax credits and low-income housing tax credits as sources of financing.
- Renovation included replacing all plumbing and electrical systems, a new boiler and exterior brick siding, new windows, seismic upgrades and interior unit improvements.

Everyone in our community deserves a safe place to call home. Lorena, 48, fled from an abusive relationship in the late '90s. She found Bronaugh Apartments in her time of need and has lived there for 10 years. After experiencing trauma from past abuse, addiction and mental illness, Lorena says living with her partner and pets at the Bronaugh brings her comfort. She likes the bustling downtown location. “Even though it's a big city, it's like a small town. People will stop and talk to you,” says Lorena. If she didn’t live at the Bronaugh, Lorena says she’d be on the street or in a group home. Here, she is part of a community.

“I feel like this is my home, and I can stay here for a long time.”

The Bronaugh Apartments, a brick building near the Goose Hollow neighborhood, is home to 60 seniors and disabled households that depend on federal rent assistance.

PRESERVATION

In 2012, the Bronaugh’s federal rent assistance contract was due to expire and the property was on the market as non-restricted housing.

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) rent assistance is temporarily extended and the permanent preservation process has begun with the building’s purchase by the nonprofit REACH CDC, using temporary bridge financing through the Network of Oregon Affordable Housing (NOAH).

A permanent plan for financing the acquisition and renovation is expected in 2015.
Everyone needs the sense of community that comes with having a place to call home. Originally from Georgia, Dolores, 67, has lived in Oregon for 40 years and at Chaucer Court for 16. A survivor of cancer, Dolores had support from her neighbors and managers at Chaucer Court when she was ill. Today, she remarks on the convenience of her downtown location, where she can take the Portland Streetcar to errands and medical appointments. Dolores says there’s nowhere she could live that would be as convenient as Chaucer Court.

“I’ve been very happy here and I am thankful to be here.”

Chaucer Court provides 84 units of affordable homes to seniors and disabled residents earning less than 60% Median Family Income (MFI) in downtown Portland.

FUNDING

The City’s $2.6M of tax increment financing from the South Park Blocks Urban Renewal Area leveraged approximately $14.7M in investments and loans from other sources including U.S. Bank to accomplish this $17.3M project.

PRESERVATION

Chaucer Court was preserved in December, 2011.

With public and private investments, Union Labor purchased and renovated Chaucer Court. This building will remain affordable for 60 years through public and private financial assistance, a long-term renewed rent assistance contract and a regulatory agreement with the City.
ECONOMIC AND BUSINESS EQUITY
Chaucer Court achieved 17.2% of MWESB participation, which included three minority business enterprise subcontractors, seven women business enterprise subcontractors and four emerging small business subcontractors.

Seniors, who helped shape our community, deserve the very best that our city has to offer. Don, 75, moved from Seattle to Portland in 1970. When he met his wife in 1990, he cut back on his work as a furniture upholsterer, and his income dropped dramatically. If it weren’t for Hawthorne East, his home for 10 years, Don says he might be homeless. Don appreciates the building’s security, affordability and quick access to transit. “We have the best bus service,” he said. Don likes to walk to his nearby garden plot, where he grows and shares vegetables and blueberries. Don is glad he can experience the “winding down” period of his life in a home that offers comfort and convenience.

“We’ve beaten the bushes to make a living. Now we give and take and live and let live.”

PRESERVATION

In 2016, the project’s federal rent assistance contract was due to expire. The former owner, Simpson Properties, approached several potential buyers to keep the housing affordable, and selected Northwest Housing Alternatives to buy the building.

A permanent plan for financing the acquisition and renovation is expected by 2016, when resources are available. The financing plan is expected to require a variety of private and public resources, including low-income housing tax credits and funds allocated by the City of Portland.
Everyone deserves access to the opportunities that our city has to offer. Dan Ding, 64, moved to Lexington Apartments nine years ago. He appreciates that it is safe, quiet and well managed. He also likes the convenient downtown location. “I like everything about this area,” said Dan, who frequents the Central Library, farmers markets and attends events in the Cultural District. A lifelong Portlander, Dan says he knows most of his neighbors and finds the Lexington to be a friendly community.

PRESERVATION

Lexington Apartments was preserved in January, 2012. The building nearly lost affordability with pending expiration of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) mortgage and rent assistance contract.

With public and private investments, Cedar Sinai Park purchased and renovated Lexington. It will remain affordable for the next 60 years through public and private financial assistance, a long-term, renewed rent assistance contract and a regulatory agreement with the City.

Lexington was one of several downtown Portland projects that benefitted from the use of “Residual Receipts” to finance the preservation effort. Residual Receipts were funds held in a HUD-controlled account by the state and represented rent subsidy in excess of operating expenses from prior years.

FUNDING

The Lexington was financed by coupling the nearby Park Tower project as a single financial project.

PHB provided two loans to this $40.7M acquisition and rehab project, including a loan of $3.5M using City funding and $2.6M in federal block grants, which helped leverage other funding from the State, private investment and a grant from Enterprise Community Partners.
ECONOMIC AND BUSINESS EQUITY
This project is expected to meet City workforce hiring and business equity goals and provide BOLI wages. It also exceeds the City procurement goals of 20% participation by MWESB contractors and will meet the outreach requirements for workforce hiring. The foundation of a healthy family is a stable home. Five years ago, Debriana, 23, was homeless. She worked in a fast food restaurant, but couldn’t cover her basic needs. Her life changed when she moved into Upshur House two years ago with her son, Ronald. Now they live within walking distance of Head Start and Ronald can play in the children’s area. “I used to be very shy,” says the vivacious young mom and recent graduate of a medical assisting program. “This has allowed me to mature and given me the chance to reflect. I’m definitely going to conquer life. My son is going to have a more fulfilling life, too.”

Our city is stronger when seniors can age in place and continue contributing to the community they helped shape. Originally from Connecticut, Bill Gentile, 64, has called Uptown Tower home for eight years. He can easily hop on public transit for appointments at the Veteran Affairs Medical Center and other errands. “You want intergenerational contact. You feel like you’re part of the community,” said Bill, who is a retired investigator with the National Labor Relations Board and is active with many organizations, including Elders in Action and the Public Involvement Advisory Committee. Bill enjoys walks to Washington Park and Powell’s Books. He said if he were not at Uptown Tower, he’d likely be isolated from services and friends.

“You don’t feel like you’re put out in the wilderness.”

The Portland Housing Bureau (PHB) invests community resources to solve the unmet housing needs of Portlanders.

Uptown Tower, a 71-unit building near the Goose Hollow neighborhood, is home to seniors, very low-income and disabled residents. The average income is 15% Median Family Income (MFI). All residents have incomes at or below 30% of MFI.

FUNDING

Funding for this project was provided by permanent loans, Section 108 funds, LIHTC Equity, Oregon Housing and Community Service funds, BETC and BES Roof Grant, Enterprise Grant, deferred developer fee, Weatherization Grant, residual receipts and cash flow during rehab.

PRESERVATION

Uptown Tower was preserved in January, 2011. The building has a U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) project-based Section 8 contract for 71 one-bedroom units, which was originally due to expire in June of 2013.

With public and private investments, Guardian Management purchased and renovated Uptown Tower.

This building will remain affordable for the next 60 years through public and private financial assistance, a long-term, renewed rent assistance contract and a regulatory agreement with the City.
ECONOMIC AND BUSINESS EQUITY
There was 25.2% MWESB contractor participation in this project, totaling $622,591, including 23% minority participation and 2% to emerging small businesses.

Everyone deserves access to opportunities in the neighborhood of their choice. After living at Walnut Park for 12 years, Gabriella, 68, says she feels inspired to paint again. She worked as a caregiver and moved around a lot because of rising rent prices. She experienced homelessness for two years. Even then, Gabriella found reasons to be happy every day, “When I am happy, I can move a mountain.” Gabriella, who moved to Oregon from Italy in 1975, lives passionately and expresses herself through Latin dance, singing karaoke, cooking, painting and gardening. “I’m very glad to be here. Here, I can take care of myself.”

The Portland Housing Bureau (PHB) invests community resources to solve the unmet housing needs of Portlanders.

Walnut Park is a 38-unit building occupied by seniors and people with disabilities with Median Family Incomes (MFI) at or below 50 percent, located in inner Northeast Portland.

PRESERVATION

Walnut Park was preserved in November, 2009. The building nearly lost affordability with pending expiration of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) mortgage and rent assistance contract.

With public and private investments, REACH purchased and renovated Walnut Park. This building will remain affordable for the next 60 years through public and private financial assistance, a long-term, renewed rent assistance contract and a regulatory agreement with the City.

This project benefited from an allocation of Tax Credit Assistance Program (TCAP) funds through Oregon Housing and Community Services (OHCS). This one-time program provided federal funds to projects that were unable to raise significant capital through the use of LIHTC credits given financial market conditions in 2009.

FUNDING

PHB provided a $1.6M Section 108 HUD guaranteed loan, leveraging $5.7M in other financing for this $7.3M acquisition and rehab preservation project. Other financing included a permanent loan from Network for Oregon Affordable Housing (NOAH), federal TCAP funds, LIHTC equity through Bank of America, Oregon weatherization funds and sponsor funds through deferred fee.
ECONOMIC AND BUSINESS EQUITY
This project had 22.6% MWESB participation with $563,595 to MWESB contractors. There was 20% minority owned participation and 3% by emerging small businesses.
