 - The information is confidential

6:00 pm—6:15 pm Chair's Report (CRC Vice Chair Bridget Donegan)

• Chair Wilson attended the COAB and Use of Deadly Force meeting. She also attended the Use of Deadly Force meeting with Chief O'Dea

Portland Police Bureau officers came to Appellant's home to search for her son, who had an active warrant. Appellant's complaint is that the responding lead officer spoke to her in a demeaning way by calling her a liar when she said her son did not live with her, and entered her home without her permission, but later provided a sworn affidavit in court stating that he was given permission to enter her home.

• IPR portion of the investigation:

- IPR received the complaint from the appellant on April 15, 2014 via fax and Investigator Eric Nomura was assigned to the case
- On April 21, the appellant's attorney called IPR office and gave IPR permission to interview the appellant and her son
- o On April 23, IPR Investigator Nomura was able to interview the appellant and her son
- May 1 appellant called and left a voicemail with Investigator Nomura indicating that the involved officer submitted a false statement in court. Investigator Nomura made attempts to obtain the affidavit and was unable to

• IA portion of the investigation

- Investigator Magill went to the Multnomah County Court house to review the e-court database regarding the civil case between the appellant and witness 2, the landlord. He was able to review 200+ documents and was unable to find any declaration or affidavit attribute to officer A
- o Investigator Magill tried to contact the appellant via phone and was unable to. He later was able to exchange emails and received documents via fax from the appellant
- The appellant was adamant that she did not give permission to officer A and witness 2 to enter her resident. She was also adamant that officer called her a liar and untruthful
- Investigator Magill used the word "affidavit" and "declaration" interchangeably throughout this case
- o Investigator Magill was unable to interview witness 1, the appellant's son
- Investigator was able to interview citizen 1, who is the landlord's attorney and were told that the declaration for officer A was prepared but it was never signed and was not entered into court, and was never filed. Citizen 1 first agreed to give Internal Affairs a copy of the affidavit but later declined citing attorney-client privilege
- Witness 2, the landlord first agreed to give Internal Affairs the a copy of the email and a copy of the affidavit but later told IA Investigator Magill that he couldn't find it
- Officer B stated that he stayed outside while he observed witness 2, the landlord coming inside. He also observed who he thought to be the appellant raising her voice
- Officer C stayed out in the back and didn't witness anything except hearing a female yelling that she is going to sue
- Officer D stated that he, Officer B and C stayed outside. Officer D also stated that the appellant was telling them that she is having an ongoing lawsuit against witness 2
- Officer A stated that he responded to the scene on a report of harassment. Officer A spoke with the appellant and did not recall asking the appellant if he could come inside, he also wasn't sure if he went inside at the time.
- Officer A was approached by the landlord and he told the landlord that he will only be there as a peacekeeper and he had no standing in the civil issue
- Officer A did not recall calling the appellant a liar
- The landlord asked Officer A if he can attend the court hearing and officer A told him he could not but he could write a quick note or email on what happened. Officer A provided to Internal Affairs the email exchange between the him and the landlord
- Citizen 2, the appellant's attorney in a later interview stated that he had given the only copy of the unsigned affidavit to the appellant

• CRC Vice Chair Donegan asked Investigator Magill several question:

- Was there any documents in the case file that show the appellant gave permission to officer A to enter her property?
 - There was no mention of the name of officer A. There was also no language indicating that the appellant gave officer A permission to enter. Both citizen 1 and 2 explained that the affidavit was prepared but it was not signed and never entered into court, but it might've been discussed in the chamber with the judge

- O Were you able to download the e-court documents?
 - Yes I was able to downloaded everything that I had access to
- Mr. Young asked Investigator Magill, if all the questions the CRC sent to IPR regarding to case answered by IA?
 - Yes
- Mr. Rivera asked Investigator Magill several questions:
 - O How officer A came to the recollection that there was an email exchange between the officer A and the landlord.
 - I asked officer A if there was an email's exchange and he logged onto his email account and printed it out
 - o Did you go through his inbox to see if there were multiple email exchanges?
 - No I did not. The landlord informed me that he recalled one email exchange with the officer
- Mr. Young asked Investigator Magill if any of the officers indicated that they told the appellant that they were there for the landlord's purposes?
 - The appellant believed there were 3 visits on that day by PPB officers. Officer A indicated there were 2, and one of the officers recalled 1. Witness 2, the landlord recalled officer A came to the door with the landlord and he asked the appellant if they could come in and she stepped aside so they both walked into the house
- Ms. Ford asked Investigator Magill Several questions:
 - Regarding to the first incident when the officers approached the resident, did you investigate further on whether or not the appellant was yelling about a dispute of officers entering her home?
 - Officer B mentioned about the yelling. Officer D mentioned about how the appellant yelled in loud voice that she is going to sue
 - It seems like there are some confusions about the number of times officer A entered the home. It seems like at one point he was still there after looking for the son...
 - Officer A stated that he went back to his car to look up a report number and the landlord approached him and started a conversation and they both went back to the apartment
- Mr. Rivera asked Investigator Magill several questions:
 - Regarding to the question submitted to Internal Affairs about how the landlord was identified by officer
 A, the initial respond was the appellant identified the landlord. Officer A stated that the landlord approached him while he was in the patrol car
 - Lt. Bell: I provided the answer to that question. I made a little bit of an assumption when answering this question. The wording was I believed the landlord was identified by the officer. It was cleared in the record because she talked about suing him
- Why didn't IA investigated further if the officer has knowledge of City's landlord-tenant laws? A landlord needs to follow specific steps in order to enter the tenant's home
 - Lt. Bell: That issue was not directly identify in the allegation. There are definitely guidelines on how landlords are supposed to enter property. My assumption was based on the landlord and officer's statements: the officer was already out there and the landlord asked the officer to come with him as a peace keeper
- CRC Vice Chair Donegan made a comment that her understanding is that the officers need to be knowledgeable of laws that apply to them
 - Lt. Bell: Regardless what the landlord-tenant said, if someone need assistance, officer will always standby. I don't believe the landlord violated any City's codes by asking to enter property

- Ms. Yarie asked Lt. Bell how a person gives permission for an officer to enter her home?
 - Giving consent could be interpret as a person stepping aside or a shrug. Ideally, you would want to hear a person give a verbal consent
- Ms. Ford asked Investigator Magill if he look into whether if the landlord had a camera or a cellphone and what the landlord's intention was to return to the resident multiple times?
 - We didn't look into if the landlord had a camera or a cellphone. The landlord told the officer he wanted to come back to check on the unit
- Mr. Rivera asked Investigator Magill several questions:
 - O During the interview with the appellant, why was she never asked if she knew that she could've said no when being asked to enter her home?
 - I didn't ask her that question because the appellant was adamant that she did not give permission
 - In this type of scenario, is the officer required to advise the person that they have the right to say no if they don't want to?
 - Lt. Bell: There's no requirement for an officer to inform people that they can say no when being asked to enter the property
- Mr. Young asked Lt. Bell if there is any PPB Directive that related to officer conduct when they are acting as peace keeper
 - o Directive 825 provides direction for officer to standby as a peace keeper on restraining order cases
- Ms. Young suggested to the Committee to hear the appellant's comments before voting on conducting an appeal hearing
- The appellant's APA Jeff Bissonnette made some comments on behalf of the appellant regarding the case:
 - In regard to the affidavit/declaration. There were some confusions in the appellant's mind between what the landlord's attorney was saying. He said he had it and then later claimed that he lost it. The appellant is wondering if there was ever a request for the landlord to ask his attorney to provide the document
 - In regards to the ongoing civil lawsuit with witness 2, the landlord. The appellant believed court order the guiding the landlord what he can and cannot do when approaching the appellant's resident. There's was not any mentioning of that in the case file
- Mr. Young asked Assistant Director Bent-Albert since the appellant's attorney declined to provide either the email or the affidavit, did IPR Investigator asked the appellant to waive attorney-client privilege? Did anyone informed the appellant that she needs to instruct her attorney to release the affidavit
 - Usually if we know there's an attorney involved in the case, IPR Investigators always try to contact the attorney to get permission to talk to the complainant. After Investigator Nomura conducted the initial interview with the appellant, there were much difficulty getting in touch with the appellant, as well as the landlord
 - Lt. Bell made a comment that the landlord's attorney believed that he gave the only copy of the affidavit to the appellant's attorney
- Mr. Young made a comment that at this point, it is not worth the time for IPR or IA to make further attempts find the affidavit and delay the appeal hearing. It is up to the ask the appellant to contact her attorney and try to get affidavit
- Vice Chair Donegan made a comment that the appellant did talk to her attorney and the attorney was nonresponsive. It seems to be very consistent that the affidavit isn't signed
- Dan Handelman's comments:
 - o There was at least one officer who said that the son opened the door and gave permission
 - He was wondering how old the appellant's son is and whether if he is aware of his right
 - o There were some confusions about the appellant not giving permission versus actually saying no
 - When a person shows up at your front door with a police officer, it is really intimidating and you might be forced to do whatever because the officer is there

- Mr. Terrell asked Vice Chair Donegan if CRC can ask for an additional investigation after had already scheduled an appeal hearing?
 - Deputy City Attorney Fullilove: CRC can always ask. CRC cannot require IPR or PPB to conduct an additional investigation
- Mr. Turner Made the motion to conduct an appeal hearing for June 3. This was seconded by Ms. Ford.

Mr. Turner: YESMr. Rivera: YESMs. Ford: YES

Vice Chair Donegan: YES

Mr. Young: YESMr. Yarie: YES

Captain Famous made a comment that CRC can ask for an additional investigation after already scheduled an appeal hearing. It has happened before and if there's a glaring issue, IA would be inclined to conduct an additional investigation
