Director's Report

1. Independent Police Review (IPR) Work Plan / Accomplishments

Auditor's Proposed Code Changes Going to City Council

City Auditor Mary Hull Caballero proposal to change Portland's police accountability system will be brought in front of City Council on September 14th.

Among the proposed code changes:

- Require that all complaints of officer misconduct are investigated
- Require that IPR is notified by the Police Bureau of all suspected officer misconduct
- Authorize the Citizen Review Committee to hear appeals in three person panels
- Reserve public comment for general meetings of the Citizen Review Committee rather than the appeal hearings, which will be scheduled separately.
- Recommended Findings completed by either IPR or Internal Affairs based on which office investigated the complaint, as opposed to current practice of having the involved officer's commander write findings
- Allows a complainant to be present at a Police Review Board hearing and provide a statement

Community Outreach

IPR Community Outreach Coordinator Irene Konev was busy this month finalizing the PRB recruitment and coordinating the CRC and PRB 40 hour training. She attended and networked at the National Night Out events, attended and networked with program participants of Healthy Baby Initiative at their graduation celebration, and participated in the Portland Police Bureau's training pilot program.

CRC/PRB training sessions

IPR and Professional Standard Division have facilitated a series of training sessions every Tuesday since August 16th. The sessions are aimed at providing PRB and CRC members with the necessary information and background to serve on the PRB and CRC. As a result of the DOJ settlement agreement and the code changes, CRC members serve as rotating PRB members in use of force cases. Prior to serving on a particular PRB, all members will have to have attended the training sessions or viewed video of the training.
