Dominant Frame

- Personal/cultural failure
- The poor deserve to be poor
- Highly racialized because of disproportionate representation of people of color

(Adapted from work by John A. Powell)

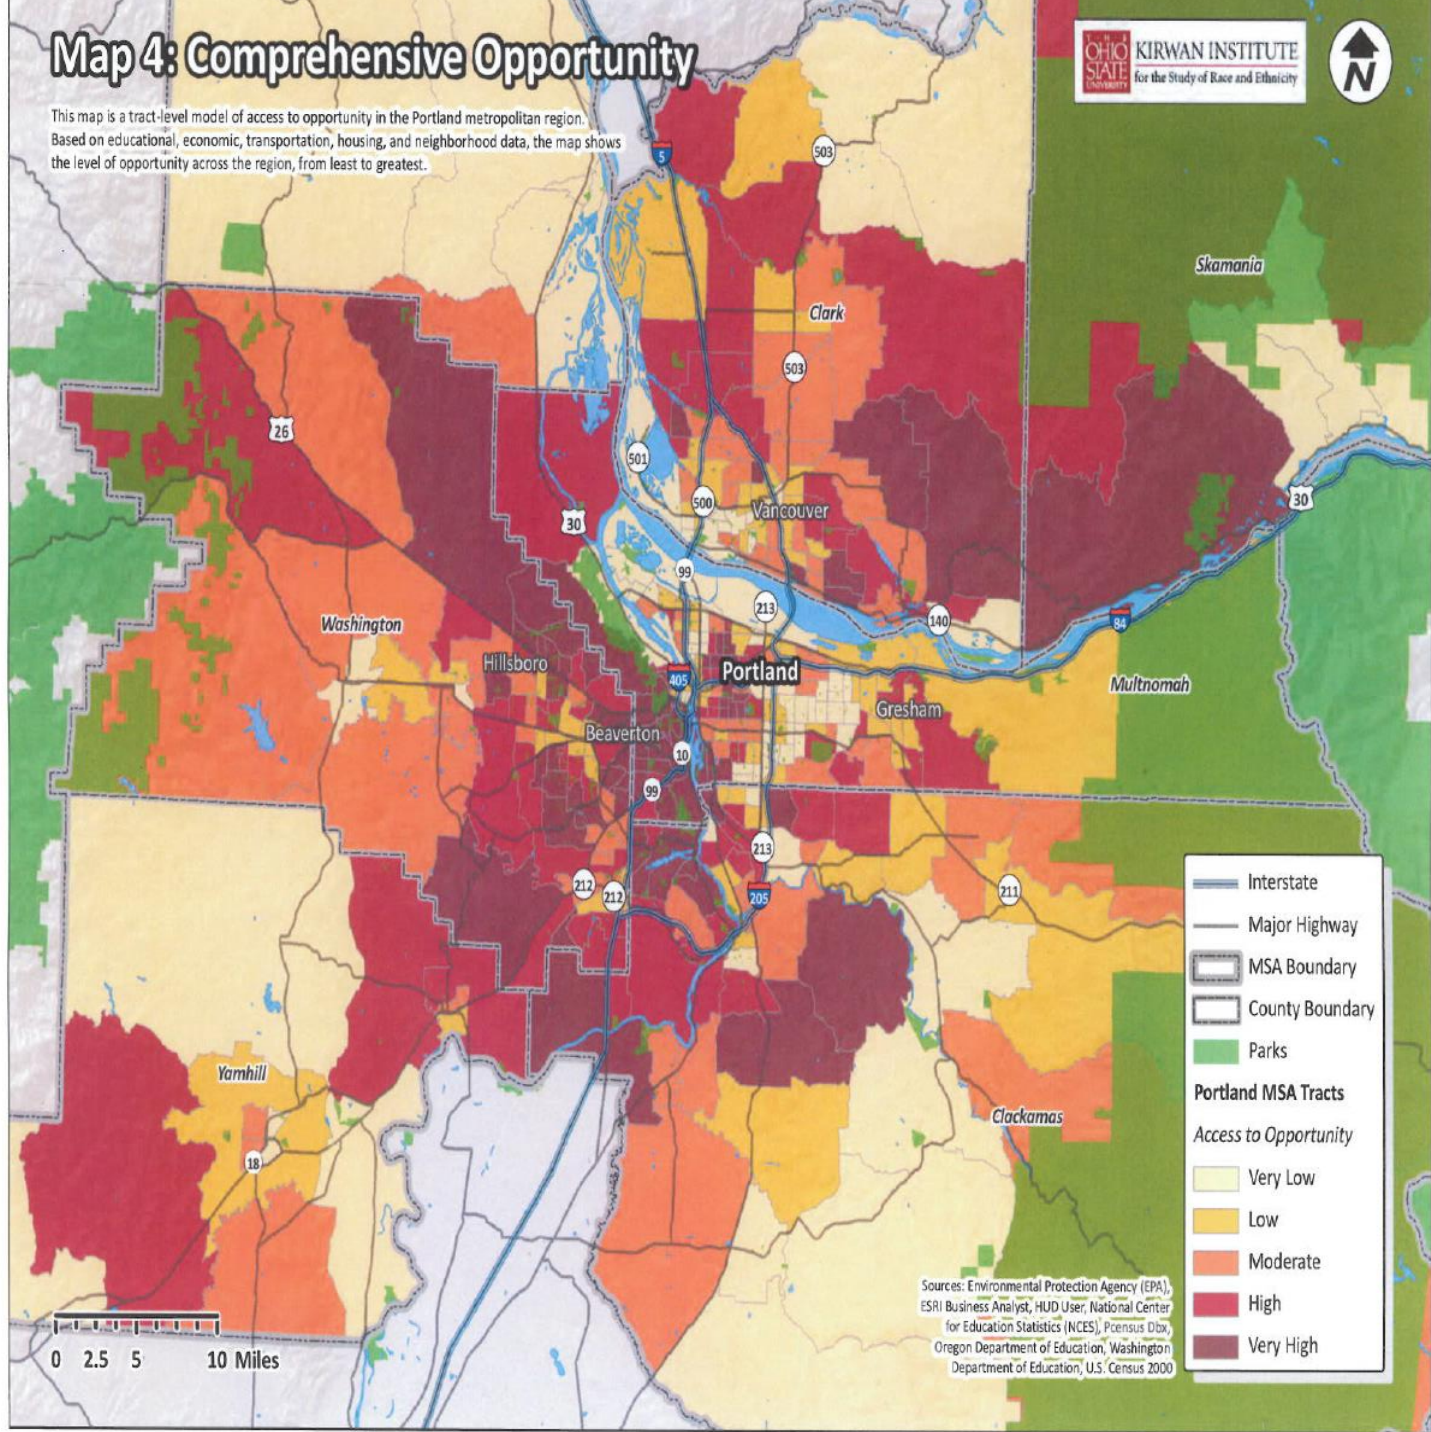

Equity Frame

- Structural failure
- Caused by inequitable access to opportunity for wealth building and success
- Explains the cycles of intergenerational poverty and the relevance of race, ethnicity and class

Living in Limited Opportunity

From The Geography of Opportunity: Mapping to Advance Racial and Social Equity in Portland, OR – Kirwan Institute - 2011

We all Live in Opportunity Structures

What is Equity?

What is Equity?

Racial Equity Approach

- What goal for all residents and who is currently left out of the picture?
- What are the barriers to access for those “left out” groups?
- What targeted strategies would achieve equitable outcomes for them?

Identify and Remove Institutional Barriers

Build Opportunity Structures

- Inclusive engagement
- Affordable housing
- Education/early – higher
- Living wage jobs
- Healthy environment
- Mobility/transportation options that work

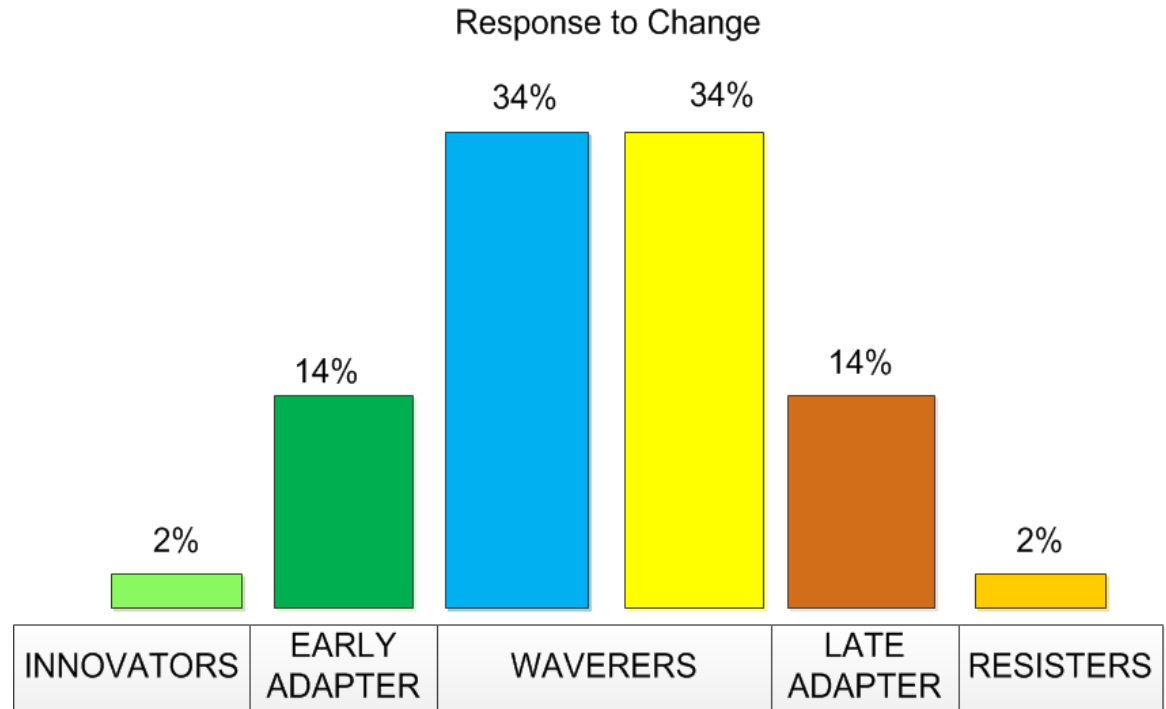

Equity Results Require Institutional Change

The most DANGEROUS phrase in the language is

The “Tipping Point” of Change

Systems and the people in them, change according to established patterns.

(Adapted from Crossroads skills and Tools for Organizing.)

System tip over point – the time when the system begins to react to change

Elements of a Successful Change Initiative

- A compelling vision; communicated to organization
- Change advocates connecting with others
- Infrastructure and training for working differently
- Leadership demonstrating commitment
- Rewards and recognition for implementation of changes and results
