YSD Meeting	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Connect with Portland Police Bureau (PPB) Youth Services Division – Question: What is PPB currently doing to engage with youth? How are they doing now? How can they improve?<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Comment by Alexandria regarding how PPB officers are perceived at Cleveland and is going to check her schedule to make sure she can attend these meetings once a month. She described that the majority of students at her school regardless if they identify as a person of color their perceptions are negative about police. It was uncool to be associated with police.○ Comment by Logan how PPB officers are perceived overall in the media. He would like to help our community “stabilize their thoughts about the police.” He added, “We don’t have chances to interact with police,” i.e. police and kids. Police should talk to people in our community more. One of the main issues is understanding each other.• Kimberly advised in her role with Kaiser Permanente, she interfaces with police regularly. She advised that she sees that the relationship with police and youth goes both ways. That it is a great idea that they spend time together so that the youth “see them (police) as humans.” PPB officers could come into the school classroom and talk about their challenges to build empathy both directions. The schools could have a student liaison position that interacts with PPB officers. We may be able to conduct surveys to gather data but there are 81 schools in PPS. A reasonable goal would be to “get 1/3 of schools involved” by surveying them. She offered to volunteer for PCCEP by offering her skills. Her skills include: organize data, question formulation, data analysis, etc.

New Business	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Britton shared some of the work that he is doing with Word is Bond and his perspectives on getting others involved.• Yolonda invited Kimberly and Alexandria to the next youth subcommittee meeting with PPB which is next week.• Yolonda advised she would reach out to our PCCEP admin to find out the next steps for Alexandria to become a Youth PCCEP member.
