What is Identity Theft?

Identity theft is when someone acquires key pieces of someone else’s identity with the intent to commit fraud. Information such as name, date of birth, social security number, mother’s maiden name, etc., can help a criminal impersonate someone. Once criminals have access to this information, they can commit many different kinds of fraud, from purchases to renting apartments, etc.

Once your identity is compromised, it may take years to straighten out all your personal records. The Portland Police Bureau’s Fraud Detail investigates identity theft, which is a felony crime. You may contact the Portland Police Bureau Fraud Detail at: 503-823-0456.

Police cannot help with your credit record or undo the damage that has been done. This brochure is designed to help you take steps to avoid being victimized. If you already have become a victim, this brochure will outline the necessary steps you must take to clean up your record.

Who does it affect?

Identity theft can happen to anyone in hundreds of different ways. The availability of high-tech tools, such as color printers and scanners, has greatly affected this crime. Today it is the fastest growing crime facing every citizen.

Delayed discovery of identity theft and the various ways criminals can now gain access to your personal information can complicate a criminal investigation. It is possible you may never find out how your personal information was compromised.
Avoid Being Victimized

You cannot shield yourself completely from being victimized, but you can minimize your risk by completing the following steps:

• Shred all personal documents Personal shredders have become very inexpensive and are well worth the cost. Criminals often work in groups going through garbage. Ask your financial institution and other places of business if they also shred their paperwork. Dumpster diving is a popular form of obtaining personal information.

• Guard your PIN at ATMs Never write the number down anywhere in your purse or wallet.

Passwords

If you use an online banking program or other services, change your password regularly. Use passwords that are a mix of numbers and letters, with a minimum of five characters, if possible. Do not use words that can be found in the dictionary – there are computer programs that search for words to crack passwords. Memorize your password and write it down only in a secure place.

• Have your checks delivered to your bank or post office box Not to your home address.

• Do not put outgoing mail in your home mailbox Take it to a postal box.

• Get a locked mailbox or post office box But be aware that thieves are known to have used locksmith tools to break into these boxes.

• Leave unused cards at home Especially your social security card or extra credit cards.
• Never give your personal information over the phone Unless you know who you are speaking to.

• Do not use your credit card number on the Internet Unless the site’s secured and encrypted.

• Make a list of your credit card and bank account numbers With customer service numbers, and keep it in a safe place.

• Monitor your bank and credit card statements every month Be aware of billing cycles – if you miss receiving a bill it can be an indication that your credit card company has received a change of address from someone other than you.

• Take your name off promotional lists You can opt out of pre-approved offers for credit cards (see back panel of this brochure).

• Remain wary of submitting personal information over the Internet Many online fraud crimes start by contacting you and asking to confirm specific account information and your social security number. Often websites look credible. As a practice, never reply to messages requesting information. Most organizations will not contact you in this manner. If you are unsure of any requests for information, contact the organization directly.

Review Your Credit
Order your credit report twice a year and review it carefully. If you have any discrepancies, write each credit agency separately and explain the situation. Refer to the ‘Cleaning Up Your Credit’ portion of this brochure for a list of the three main credit agencies.
