Dear Reader:

The beginning of 1998 brought much sadness to the Portland Police Bureau once again. In January, Officer Colleen Waibel was killed in the line of duty, and Officer Kim Keist and Sgt. Jim Hudson were injured. In a separate incident, Sgt. David Howe was also injured by gunfire that month. The community showed its support for the Police Bureau once again, as they graciously did so in 1997 when Officer Tom Jeffries was killed.

Though our year began with tragedy, the remainder of 1998 brought many triumphs. In 1998, the Portland Police Bureau completed its ninth year of community policing and its first year of the 1998-2000 Strategic Plan. This plan, which outlines the mission, objectives and the five-year goals of the Bureau, provides a blueprint for community policing.

This year the Bureau also began Operation 80, an intensive recruiting and training effort for community policing officers. This recruitment, as well as the first basic academy Portland has had in 25 years, will allow us to staff up to our authorized level, giving officers more time to solve chronic problems.

Another effort aimed at attacking chronic problems was the formation of the Youth Gun Anti-Violence Task Force (YGAT), which brings together officers from the Portland Police Bureau, other law enforcement agencies, youth service providers, other city offices, social service agencies and community members. The strike force was formed to implement the 23-point strategies discussed in the "Mayor's Response to Youth Gun Violence," a plan developed in response to the increasing amount of youth violence in Portland.

As we work toward the millennium, we have made a committed effort to keeping up with technology. By combining technology and community policing, we are able to focus on doing our jobs more efficiently, thereby allowing us to focus on our main goal of reducing crime and the fear of crime. Technology, such as the Crime Analysis and Mapping Information Network (CAMIN) system, allows officers to produce crime analysis maps that illustrate what and where crimes are occurring in Portland's neighborhoods.

Also with the future in mind, in late 1998, the Police Bureau hired consultants from the Institute for Law and Justice (ILJ) and embarked on a project entitled PPB Vision: Taking Community Policing to the Next Level. The goal of this endeavor is to obtain insight from virtually all segments of the community as to how the Bureau should move into the next century.

Additional accomplishments are outlined in this report.

Charles A. Moose, Ph.D.

Portland Police Bureau 1998 Accomplishments

Strategic Assessment

In June 1998, the City Council approved the Police Bureau's 1998-2000 Strategic Plan. This plan, updated every two years, sets for the Bureau's five-year goals and objectives, and defines its mission:

The mission of the Portland Police Bureau is to maintain and improve community livability by working with all citizens to preserve life, maintain human rights, protect property and promote individual responsibility and community commitment.

All Police Bureau objectives and strategies are developed under the following four goals:

- Reduce crime and fear of crime
- Empower the community
- Develop and empower personnel
- Strengthen planning, evaluation and fiscal support

Reduce Crime and Fear of Crime

Bureau Wins Award

The Arc of the U.S. (formerly Association for Retarded Citizens) presented its Distinguished Community Service Award to the Portland Police Bureau at its annual convention in October 1998.

In its nomination of the Bureau, the Arc of Multnomah County highlighted the training that Portland provides its police personnel on how to identify and communicate with people who have developmental disabilities, and the new Safety Zone: Cops Talk training that is taught to adults with developmental disabilities. The award also honored Crisis Intervention Team officers as well as the Disability Alert Registration program.

Computer Crimes Detail

In January 1998, the Computer Crimes Detail unit became operational, and included two full-time investigator positions and two part-time investigator positions. The Computer Crimes Detail Unit's mission is to provide investigative support and expertise in computer and high technology crime.

Crime Analysis and Mapping Information Network (CAMIN)

The Police Bureau began training officers in all precincts in the Bureau's new Crime Analysis and Mapping Information Network (CAMIN). The system allows Bureau members to search and place on a map, recent Computer Aided Dispatch (CAD) data and/or Portland Police Data System (PPDS) information. This encompasses 9-1-1 calls and officers' arrest data.

CAMIN was installed at all precincts and divisions in April 1998. Until CAMIN, there was not a program that was simple to use that could mix CAD and police report information. The system will help crime analysts and Neighborhood Response Team officers identify areas plagued by particular crimes and provide updated data to plan strategies to deter the crimes.

Dial and Deliver

The Police Bureau received a grant that will allow them to purchase a dial and deliver telephone notification system to get information directly to an affected portion of the community during times of disaster, localized hazard, or threat to person or property. The grant, awarded by the U.S. Department of Justice, gives the Police Bureau $247,000 for the 12-month project. The Bureau began working on developing the project in fall 1998.

The emergency call-up system will allow the Police Bureau to warn communities via a recorded telephone message in the event of a severe weather emergency, such as people living on a flood plain or in houseboats on the Willamette or Columbia Rivers. It would also be used to notify residents within the hazardous perimeter of toxic spills, barricaded felons, snipers or bomb threats. In addition, this emergency notification system can also warn of a lost child or person with Alzheimer's who has wandered away from home or a care facility.

Explosive Disposal Unit vehicle

The Police Bureau's Explosive Disposal Unit (EDU) has a new state-of-the-art vehicle for responding to all EDU calls. The new truck features high-tech equipment, a built-in area for officers to work the remote-controlled robot, and allows police to be up to a half-mile away from the scene when exploding a device. The truck also features an extended cab section that allows more officers to travel in the truck, and outside lights for illuminating nighttime incidents.

The new truck was funded mainly through a grant, but also features equipment that the Police Bureau already had. The vehicle will respond to other situations aside from just bombs, including many calls for the Special Emergency Reaction Team (SERT).

Long Guns

The Police Bureau acquired AR-15 rifles and began training its officers on usage in spring 1998. The guns replace the 12-gauge shotguns. The AR-15 semi-automatic weapons are highly accurate, easier to use and safer than shotguns. The new weapons can also be fired from a much safer distance.

Operation 80

The Police Bureau began Operation 80, an aggressive effort to hire 80 officers between fall 1998 and February 1999. The Bureau hired retired officers to help with background checks and increased its recruiting efforts. Representatives from the Police Bureau's Human Resources Division traveled to a number of job fairs in the region. When identifying which job fairs to attend, the Bureau looked at institutions that have military installations in close proximity. The Division has identified colleges and universities that have had relationships with the Bureau or have provided the Bureau with a pool of applicants in the past.

In addition, the Police Bureau also began advertising on the web, various newspapers, and Portland radio stations, including a radio station specializing in a Hispanic format. The Police Bureau also ran advertisements for a week on ESPN and CNN.

Operation Lightning

Prior to spring break, Northeast Precinct conducted undercover drug sweeps in a mission called, "Operation Lightning." Fifty persons were indicted on drug charges and 40 were arrested.

The undercover drug mission focused on street-corner drug dealers at work around the Northeast area. Illegal drug activity in these areas has been the particular focus of many citizen complaints and has been a serious concern of district officers.

Officers began the mission several months prior as covert drug buys were made from individuals who were selling drugs from neighborhood street corners. Rather than make immediate arrests, the cases were presented to the Multnomah County Grand Jury, who reviewed the cases and issued indictments. With the indictments in hand, officers from Northeast Precinct and the Gang Enforcement Team proceeded with arresting the suspects.

Following a vote by City Council, the Bureau expanded the use of photo radar to include neighborhoods, the downtown area and high-complaint or high-traffic areas. No extra officers or equipment were added in the expansion. As of October 1998, photo radar issued more than 18,000 citations.

Safety Zone: Cops Talk

The Police Bureau began its new program, Safety Zone: Cops Talk in spring 1998. The program, which is funded by a grant through the U.S. Department of Justice, is for adults with developmental disabilities and their direct care workers. The program was developed to provide personal safety skills, information on staying out of trouble with the law and using police resources more appropriately.

Safety Zone: Cops Talk is a cooperative effort between the Portland Police Bureau, The Arc of Multnomah County, Multnomah County Division of Developmental Disabilities, Multnomah County District Attorney's Office, Rainbow Adult Living, Independent Living Resources, United Cerebral Palsy Association of Oregon and Southwest Washington and community partnerships.

Classes were taught by a uniformed officer and a co-trainer. Ten different classes were developed.

Traffic Award

The Police Bureau's Traffic Division recently won the 1997 IACP Chief's Challenge award for its enforcement work. The Division received a Golden Eagle Radar Unit as part of the award. In its application for the award, the Police Bureau supplied a report, which demonstrated that in 1997, the Police Bureau has increased its traffic enforcement by 35 percent; this corresponds with a reduction in fatal collisions by 16 percent. In addition, the Enhanced Vehicle Safety Enforcement Program (EVSEP) responded to more than 700 traffic complaints in 1997.

Traffic Enforcement Coverage Expanded

In February, the Traffic Division expanded the hours of coverage to provide more comprehensive traffic enforcement. The Division began providing 20 hours of enforcement seven days a week; previously, the Division had to scale back coverage due to budgetary issues.

In addition, the Division also added five motorcycle officers and a sergeant as part of a federal grant to respond to citizen traffic complaints. Through its Enhanced Vehicle Safety Enforcement Program (EVSEP), the officers target neighborhood streets that have high traffic violations or traffic complaints.

Youth Gun Anti-Violence Task Force (YGAT)

In June 1998, the Police Bureau formed the Youth Gun Anti-Violence Task Force (YGAT), which brings together officers from the Portland Police Bureau, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF), the Multnomah County Sheriff's Office, Oregon State Police and other local agencies. In addition, the Strike Force includes representatives from the Multnomah County District Attorney's Office, Oregon Youth Authority and Parole and Probation.

The Strike Force was formed to implement the 23 strategies discussed in the "Mayor's Response to Youth Gun Violence," a plan developed in response to the increasing amount of youth violence in Portland.

Empower the Community

Broadcast Agreement

The Police Bureau and representatives from the Mayor's Office met with local television stations and formulated an agreement regarding coverage of critical incidents. The agreement came after the violent incident in which one police officer was killed and two were injured in a shootout in January 1998.

Following the incident, Chief Moose, Mayor Vera Katz and the community were outraged at the stations' live coverage that put officers in danger. Television station representatives agreed to keep their helicopters at appropriate distances from crime scenes as well as not show any police tactical maneuvers on live television. In return, the Police Bureau demonstrated defensive tactics and Special Emergency Reaction Team (SERT) maneuvers to television reporters to better educate them on how the Police Bureau responds to critical incidents.

Gang Tattoo Removal Project

Central Precinct officers are participating in a program which allows youth the opportunity to have gang tattoos removed. Cmdr. Bob Kauffman, Central Precinct, was given a "special service award" by the Oregon Psychiatric Association in early 1998. Cmdr. Kauffman and Central Precinct officers are part of a sub-committee of the group that's called "the Gang Tattoo Removal Project."

This non-profit group has raised funds and purchased a laser dermatology tattoo removal machine which is kept at Hillcrest School and operated by volunteer dermatologists. More than 100 inmates have had their gang tattoos removed as part of rejecting the gang lifestyle.

Housing Density Points

The Police Bureau developed Minimum Residential Security Recommendations for new housing that can be incorporated into new developments. By incorporating these standards, a development will receive 10 percent density bonus points. That is, the Planning Bureau will allow them to add 10 percent more units than would otherwise be allowed.

The recommendations include strengthening the door frame, filling the space between the door jamb and frame, protecting the glass within 40 inches of locks, and specifications for lock, strike plate and hinge installation.

The recommendations also reflect specifications that are in Chapter 41 of the Uniform Building Code for Oregon. This is an optional security building code for multi-family and commercial buildings that local jurisdictions can approve for their own areas.

Youth Survey Completed

In August, the East Precinct Youth Advisory Council finished a survey of area high schools, asking teens how they feel about public safety. Council members traveled to eight East Portland high schools; 14% of students were surveyed.

Students unanimously answered that sexual assault/date rape was the number one problem police should focus on. Following sexual assaults, were gang problems and guns.

Among all schools, both boys and girls felt most safe at shopping malls, going out with friends, driving in their neighborhood and staying home alone during the day. The students said they felt the least safe in parks.

The East Precinct Youth Advisory Council was formed in 1996, involving students from various East Portland high schools. The teens meet with East Precinct command personnel, neighborhood crime prevention staff and various community members.

Develop and Empower Personnel

Bureau Awards

The Bureau held an awards ceremony in July 1998. The following people were honored:

Meritorious Service Medal For Valor:

Rian Hamby; Thomas Powell; Daryl Turner; Robert Volz (citizen).

Distinguished Service Medal: Clyde Harmon; James McDaniel; Randall Brandt; Karl Sprague; Rocky Balada; Robert Clevenger; Bret Smith; Larry Findling; Cliff Jensen.

Commendation Medal: Cindy Rose; Tom Hunt; Len Braithwait; Elizabeth Pearce; Angela Ossenkop; Jim Gaebel (retired); Catherine Kent; John Greisen (retired); Scott Johnson; DDA Jim Hayden; Albert Jasper (citizen).

Unit Commendation: Southeast Precinct/ATTF; Gang Enforcement Team; Fire Bureau.

Letter Of Commendation: Len Braithwait; Steve Jones; Chris Caramella.

Collision Review Board

For fiscal year 1998, the number of Collision Review Board (CRB) cases dropped nearly 10%. A total of 190 cases were reviewed by the Board compared to an average of 209 over the previous two years. This decrease is the first time in three years.

The Collision Review Board (CRB), comprised of Bureau members, meets monthly to review and analyze all collisions involving Police Bureau assigned vehicles. After all the reports, testimony and information are gathered, the board makes a recommendation to command personnel to determine whether or not an employee could have prevented the incident from occurring. Statistics are collected and maintained in the Loss Control Unit.

Computer Training Room

The Police Bureau renovated a room in the Planning and Support Division, creating the Bureau's first computer training room. Crime analysts began training officers on the Bureau's new Crime Analysis and Mapping Information Network (CAMIN) in May 1998. Other Bureau employees were also trained in the use of PowerPoint. Other classes will be offered in the computer training room as needed.

Day Care Center

In late 1998, the Police Bureau committed to a year-long pilot project, and began construction in the first floor of the Justice Center for a day care center. The day care center will be used by Bureau employees for permanent and part-time care. The day care center will allow officers called in for special duty or court to use the facility for a small fee on short notice.

Applications were distributed in December 1998, and the day care center was projected to open March 1999. An outside provider will be chosen to run the day care on a day-to-day basis, and a committee of Police Bureau members will oversee the center.

Emotional Survival Training

The Employee Assistance Program (EAP) offered emotional survival training to Bureau members and their families four times in summer 1998. The Bureau's 12 trained emotional survival instructors taught classes at various precincts in the evening. Though this type of training was also available at in-service, this was the first time this kind of training was also open for Bureau members to bring their families.

Employee Assistance Program (EAP) Changes

The Police Bureau reconfigured the way it handles the Employee Assistance Program (EAP). An officer was assigned as the coordinator, and the program was relocated to the building that houses the Fire and Police Disability and Retirement Fund (FPD&R). Having the program outside of the precincts or Justice Center was important to employees and their feelings regarding confidentiality. The officer oversees support programs such as the Peer Support Team, the Police Alcohol Recovery Team (PART), Volunteer Chaplains and the Traumatic Incident Committee (TIC).

Employer Support Freedom Award

In October 1998, the Police Bureau was presented with the Employer Support Freedom Award by Secretary of Defense William S. Cohen. The Employer Support Freedom Award was instituted in 1996 by the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (NCESGR), which is part of the Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs.

The Police Bureau was one of five employers nationwide to receive the award, which recognizes employers who have provided outstanding support to their National Guard and Reserve Employees.

The Police Bureau employs approximately 85 National Guard and Reserve members. When Police Bureau Reservists are deployed, the Bureau encourages them to communicate via e-mail with Bureau and family members. Messages to family members are forwarded when received through the Bureau.

Peer Support Team

In the spring of 1998, the Police Bureau formed the Peer Support Team, a voluntary and confidential resource for all Bureau employees and their families. The purpose of the program is to provide support and assistance for personal problems before they become acute.

In May, the 24 members of the Peer Support Team received 24 hours of professional training given by San Francisco Police Department's Peer Support Team. These new Peer Support Team members have been trained to be effective listeners and to provide feedback, clarify issues, and assist employees in identifying options for problem resolution. When problems are acute or appear to require specialized assistance, information on referral resources will be made available to employees and their families.

Question, Persuade, Refer (QPR) Training

The Employee Assistance Program (EAP) became certified in QPR—a suicide prevention technique. This training was given to the Bureau's RU Managers and will be given to nonsworn during nonsworn in-service, beginning in January 1999. The training will also be given to all officers.

Safety Recognized

At a special City Council session in September, the Police Bureau's sworn safety committee was honored with a "Partnership in Prevention" award presented by Mayor Vera Katz. Committee members along with Chief Moose were present to accept the award. The award recognizes the committee for its ongoing effort to promote awareness in the area of occupational safety and health.

Stress Training for Command Staff

In March, the Police Bureau's command staff received training from noted police psychologist, Dr. Kevin Gilmartin. The training focused on handling the stress of police work, making personal time valuable, how to incorporate other activities into busy lives and other life roles. This training was also valuable due to the tremendous stress involved in helping officers handle their grief following the loss of Officers Thomas Jeffries and Colleen Waibel.

Training Academy

The Police Bureau transferred personnel and began formulating its own 16-week training academy for new officers. For the first time in 25 years, the Police Bureau will train its own officers, rather than send them to the state training facility in Monmouth. The new academy will begin in February 1999, and will provide a short-term opportunity to train more police officers than the state facility could accept.

The Bureau has not received any additional funding for the project, and has relied on existing personnel to run the academy. The Bureau has worked closely with the state facility to comply with all state regulations regarding training and curriculum.

Strengthen Planning, Evaluation and Fiscal SupportEmployee Survey

The 1998 Portland Police Bureau Employee Survey was the fourth survey of all Bureau employees. The Bureau has surveyed its employees every 18 months since September 1993. The 1998 survey was sent to all 1,228 employees in February. The response rate was 50%, with 614 surveys returned.

Overall, the survey showed that employees agree as to what police activities are important to the Bureau and where it should be focusing its efforts. Most of the respondents also feel good about the work they do and think the Police Bureau is a good organization to work for.

The highest ranked statement in 1998 was, "I feel good about the work I do." Eighty percent of respondents agreed with this statement.

National Community Policing Conference

The Police Bureau conducted its third national community policing conference in September 1998. An estimated 500 people from 30 states and five countries attended the conference, which provided participants with insight into how to measure and enhance current community policing programs.

Keynote speakers for the conference included: Mayor Vera Katz, City of Portland; Governor John Kitzhaber, State of Oregon; Myrlie Evers-Williams, Chairman Emeritus of the NAACP and founder of the Medgar Evers Institute; Joseph Brann, Director, U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Community Oriented Policing Services; and Charles Moose, Portland, Oregon, Police Chief.

Police Bureau's Vision

In August 1998, the Police Bureau hired consultants from the Institute for Law and Justice (ILJ) and embarked on a project entitled PPB Vision: Taking Community Policing to the Next Level. The goal of this endeavor is to obtain insight from virtually all segments of the community as to how the Bureau should move into the next century.

The ILJ consultants facilitated more than 35 focus groups listening to hundreds of individuals representing schools, neighborhoods, businesses, elected officials, representatives from the media, social services, city bureaus, criminal justice agencies, the faith community and Bureau membership. Participants have been asked their vision on what needs to be expanded/enhanced, added or deleted, and linked or partnered in order for the Bureau to become the agency we would want to become over the next decades.

This information is being presented to the Bureau's steering committee made up of Bureau members from all branches. These members are charged with reviewing the ILJ findings and assist in creating a final report which will be completed in early spring 1999.

Strategic Plan—1998-2000

The City Council adopted the Police Bureau's 1998-2000 Strategic Plan in June 1998. This plan, updated every two years, sets forth the Bureau's five-year goals and objectives, and defines its mission. In the 1998-2000 Plan, the Police Bureau called for a 14 percent reduction in reported crime. The Council also adopted the Bureau standards for 2 per 1,000 sworn staffing levels, a five-minute response time to high priority calls and an allocation of 35 percent of an officer's time available for problem solving.

Traffic Division Moves

In November 1998, the Traffic Division moved to its new location at 1319 S.E. Martin Luther King Blvd, near the Hawthorne Bridge. The Traffic Division had been housed in Northeast Precinct for the last year. The new building is accessible to the public, and is open from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Significant Events

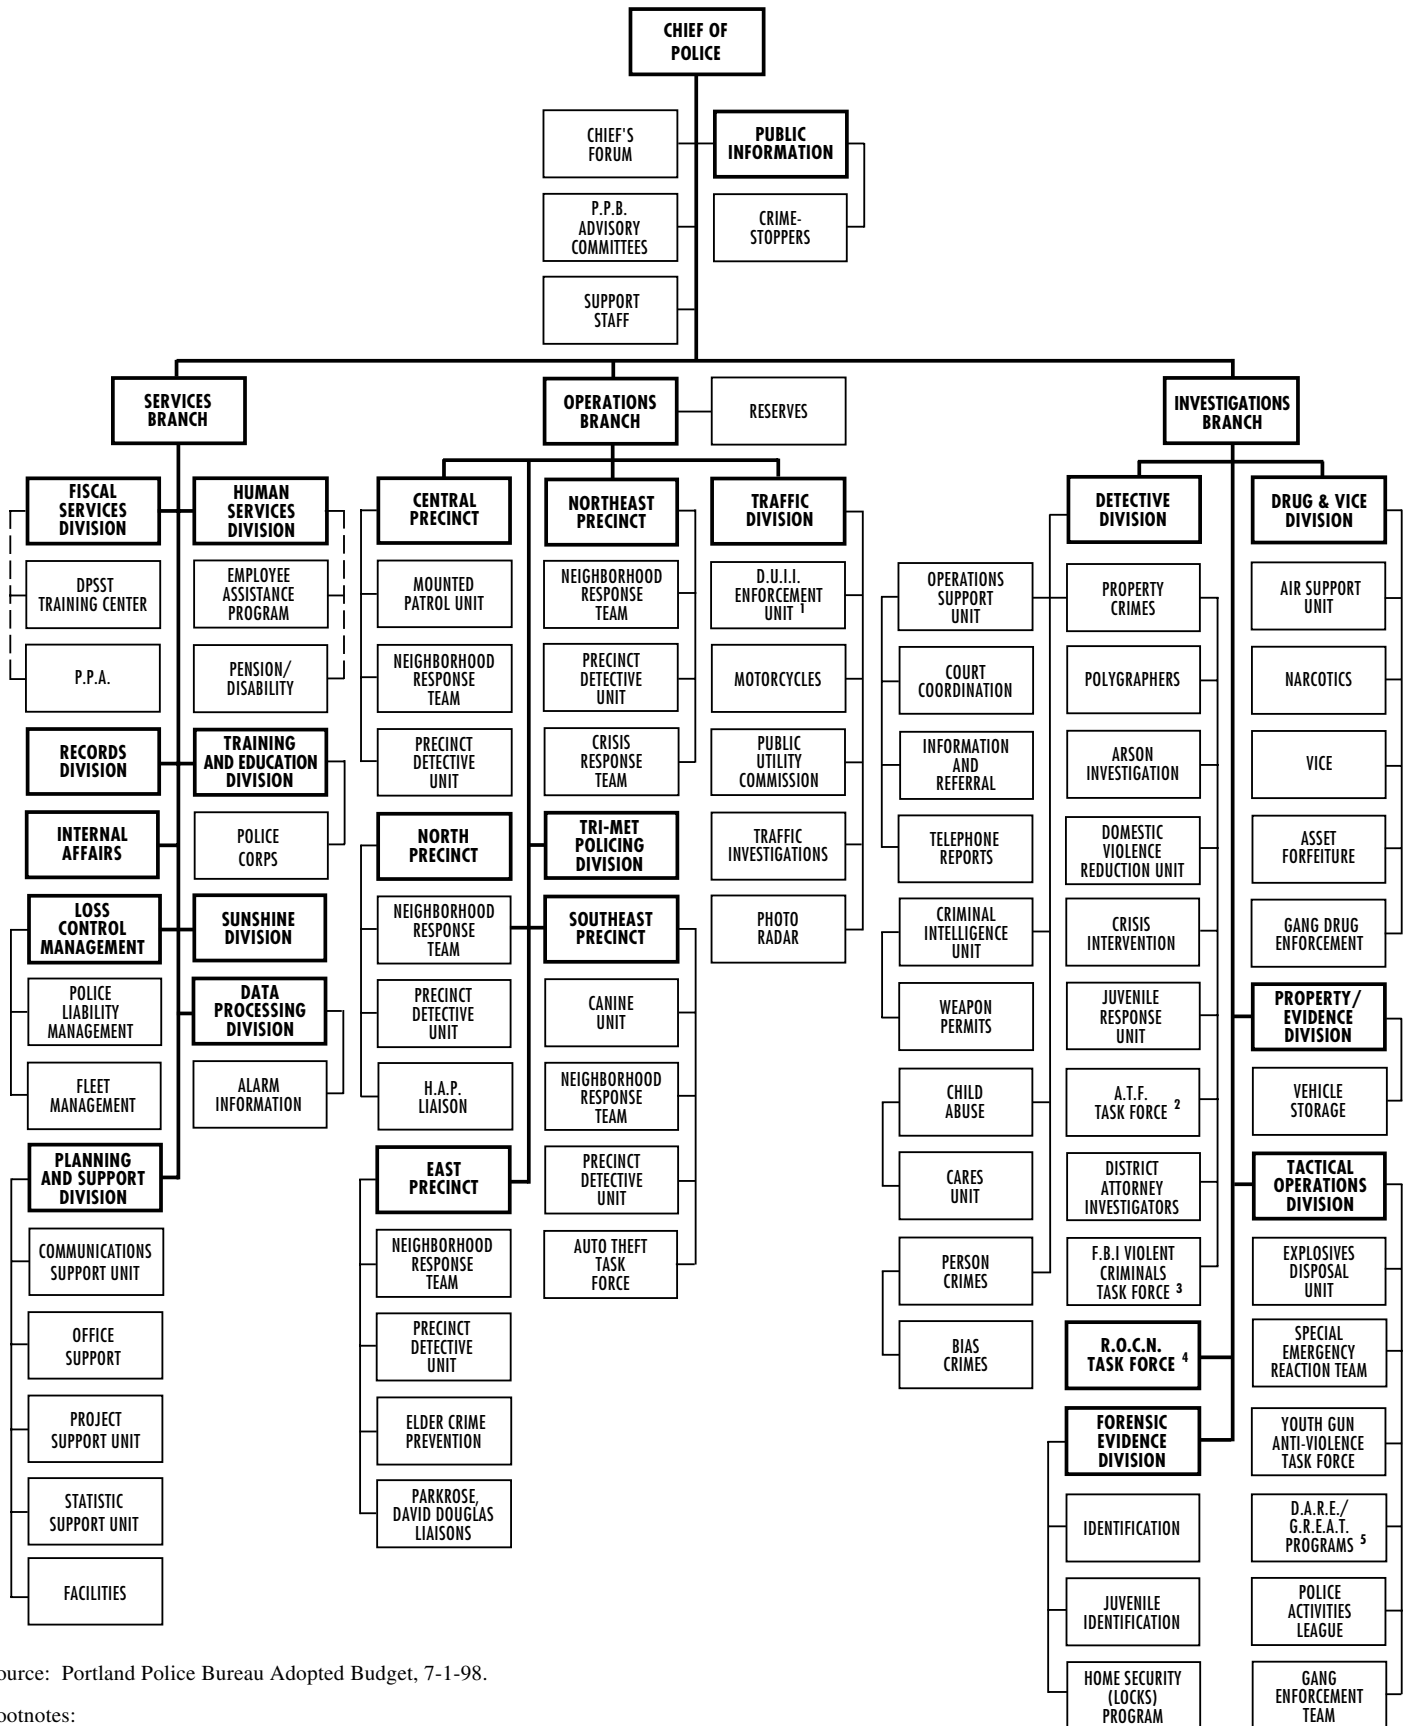

The death of Officer Colleen Waibel, and shooting of Officer Kim Keist and Sgt. Jim Hudson:

During a routine effort by the Marijuana Task Force, Officer Colleen Waibel became the city's first woman police officer to be killed in the line of duty and the second Portland officer to be killed in more than 18 years. During the violent incident, Officer Kim Keist was seriously wounded and Sgt. Jim Hudson was shot in the hand. The suspect was apprehended and later killed himself while in custody of Multnomah County corrections facility.

The community greatly mourned the loss of Officer Waibel and sent letters of support to Officers Keist and Hudson.

Rose Festival Parade

In June 1998, the Police Bureau received the distinct honor of being the Grand Marshal of the Grand Floral Parade. Riding in the parade were employees representing all branches of the Bureau. Retired officers drove the convertibles in which Bureau members rode.

Footnotes:

1. Data on "Dispatched Calls" are from BOEC (Bureau of Emergency Communication) Computer Aided Dispatch (CAD) Systems incident tapes and include all calls to 9-1-1 and non-emergency calls for which a patrol car was dispatched.
2. Population numbers are for July 1 of the given year and are from Portland State University, Center for Population Research and Census. Since 1990 approximately 75% to 90% of Portland's population growth has been due to annexations to the City of Portland.
3. TRU calls are calls for service which are handled by the Telephone Report Unit, either by giving advice, taking a report, or mailing a report form for the complainant to complete and return. Excluded are calls that were initially screened by TRU officers for which a patrol car was subsequently dispatched (3,679 calls in 1998).
4. The Police Bureau converted to a new CAD system in March 1994 so data from previous years may not be exactly comparable.
5. Data available only for March-December 1994.
